

STEPHANIE LOCKHART

I graduated from the College in 2015. After spending 13 years there it was sad to leave, but I was excited to see what the future held. This year, after being accepted into the course I was hoping for, I began a Bachelor of Social Science with a major in Development Studies and Culture Change at Macquarie University. I am loving university life and all of the new things I am learning.

I am so grateful for the role that Rouse Hill Anglican College played in investing in me an individual to go out into the world. During my time at school my eyes were opened to so many new things that have encouraged me on my journey into university. I can't wait to see how the College develops further over the next few years, and seeing the students that come out with a passion to do something positive in this world; that passion that was instilled in me. Overall, I have loved the experience of leaving school and starting uni, and feel blessed for my time at the College.
